IN grateful Return for the distinguished Approbation, with which this little Work has been honoured, the Editor's Line of Correspondence hath been considerably enlarged, and the Channels of Information greatly extended; he hath thereby been enabled to render the NEPTUNE OF EUROPE correct and accurate to the Day of Publication; and to make it more complete, hath added to this Edition a List of such Lieutenants of the Royal Navy as are also Commanders of any of his Majesty's Vessels; sundry comparative Views of the Loss or Gain of the maritime Powers; with the general Balance with each; and the present Shipping in the Service of the East-India Company.

Each Alteration that happens in the respective Navies, will be carefully noted in every future Edition; so that though the Materials of which this Work is composed are necessarily fluctuating, it will always be correct when published.

In answer to an Objection that hath arisen in the Minds of some against this Work; namely, That it may make our naval Strength known to our Enemies; it may be justly replied, That the Knowledge of that Strength, and the Names of those who command it, will be rather Objects of Terror than Comfort to the Enemies of Great-Britain.

The Officers of the Victualling at the other Ports, are shewn in Table III. and the daily Allowance of Provisions for each Man in the Navy, in Table IV.

This is the Allowance of Provisions; but it must be observed, that the Purser being allowed one-eighth of the Beer, for Leakage, the real Quantity for each Seaman is seven Pints a Day. Yet, as they want Vessels to contain it, it is not served out to them in Quantities, but each Man is allowed to drink what he pleases.

When the Ship has been so long at Sea, as to expend all the Beer, then each Seaman is allowed a Pint of Wine a Day, if the Ship is in the Mediterranean; half a Pint of Rum, if in the West-Indies; half a Pint of Brandy, if in the North Seas, or the Bay of Biscay; or half a Pint of Arrack, if in the East-Indies, in lieu of their Beer. But, lest the raw Spirits should be of Prejudice to their Health, it is always mixed with twice the Quantity of Water, before it is issued out to the Seamen.

In like Manner, half a Pound of Rice is sometimes delivered in lieu of a Pint of Oatmeal; and a Pint of Olive Oil in lieu of a Pound of Butter, or two Pounds of Cheese; when those Articles are expended.

Although the Allowance of Peas and Oatmeal is settled, yet the Men are allowed as much as they will eat, it being boiled for them by the Cook.

To preserve the Seamen's Health, they may, once a Week, change their Meat for Puddings, in the following Proportion:

Four Pounds of Flour are equivalent to one four Pound Piece of Beef, or two Pound Piece of Pork, with Pease. So are also

Three Pounds of Flour, with a Pound of Raisins;

Three Pounds of Flour, with half a Pound of Currants; or,

Three Pounds of Flour, with half a Pound of pickled Beef Suet.

The Proportion of one Ell of Canvas to every sixteen Men, is allowed to make Pudding Bags; and a wooden Bowl, a wooden Platter, and a Quart wooden Can to every Mels of four Men, with a wooden Spoon for each Man.

When Ships are in Harbour, the Men have fresh Beef, or Mutton, two Days in the Week, three Pounds of Mutton being held equal to four Pounds of Beef, or two Pounds of Pork with Pease.

III. The ORDNANCE-OFFICE.

From this Office issue all the warlike Stores, such as Cannons and their Furniture, small Arms, Powder, Shot, Matches, &c. which are delivered to the Charge of the Gunner, who hath under him an Armourer and Gun-Smith. As the Office of Ordnance hath both a civil and military Branch, and supplies the Troops and Garrisons as well as the Navy, we shall not enumerate the whole of the Officers, but only such as immediately appertain to the Naval Ordnance Stores; namely, the sundry Storekeepers.
